Privacy Policy for the use of Google +1

Using the Google +1 button, you can publish information worldwide. The Google +1 button provides you and other users with personalized content from Google and its partners. Google stores both the information that you have given +1 for a piece of content and information about the page you were viewing when you clicked +1. Your +1 may be displayed as references along with your profile name and photo in Google services, such as in search results or in your Google profile, or elsewhere on websites and ads across the internet.

Google records information about your +1 activity to improve Google services for you and others.

To use the Google +1 button, you need a globally visible, public Google profile that must contain at least the name you chose for the profile. This name will be used across all Google services. Social Plugins

Social media plugins are used on our websites. These plugins may send information, which may also include personal data, to the service provider and possibly used by them. We prevent the unconscious and unwanted collection and transmission of data to the service provider using a 2-click solution. To activate a desired social plugin, it must first be activated by clicking on the corresponding switch. Only when the plugin is activated does the collection of information and its transmission to the service provider occur. We do not collect any personal data ourselves using the social plugins or through their use.

We have no influence on what data an activated plugin collects and how this data is used by the provider. At present, it must be assumed that a direct connection to the provider's services is established and that at least the IP address and device-related information is collected and used. It is also possible that the service providers attempt to store cookies on the computer used. Google AdWords

Our website uses Google Conversion Tracking. The operator of Google AdWords services is Google LLC, 1600 Amphitheatre Parkway, Mountain View, CA 94043, USA. If you reached our website via an ad placed by Google, Google AdWords will place a cookie on your computer. The conversion tracking cookie is set when a user clicks on an ad placed by Google.

If the user visits certain pages of our website and the cookie has not yet expired, we and Google can recognize that the user clicked on the ad and was redirected to this page. Each Google AdWords customer receives a different cookie. Cookies cannot therefore be tracked across the websites of AdWords customers. The information collected using the conversion cookie is used to compile conversion statistics for AdWords customers who have opted for conversion tracking. Customers will learn the total number of users who clicked on their ad and were redirected to a page with a conversion tracking tag. However, they will not receive any information that can be used to personally identify users.
